I object to the proposed electric vehicle mandate because there is not enough electricity statewide to support this move in the timeframe proposed. There are several projects proposed but are moving very slowly if at all. The increased use of heat pumps is increasing which also takes more power than wood. Jumping into something simply because California did it is risky. They are in a deficit mode because of their reckless policies. A move of this type needs to have all of the pieces in place before action. Otherwise a whole lot of Mainers will freeze to death.
