Folks I would think of what just happened you would understand that we are not even remotely close to operating our homes without some sort of backup meaning LP ,gasoline ,and diesel generators when the power goes down , and just how do You plan on charging EV's when your power is out for several days , look at some point you may get there but your living in a pipe dream and if you adopt rules such as California this quickly you don't have a lot of common sense . You aren't going to be able to do this with a stroke of the pen it is going to take time to get there !
