My wife and I have been residents of Rockport for more than 30 years. A rule mandating electric vehicles in Maine makes no sense. This type of decision needs to be made by elected officials who are accountable for their decisions to their constituents. There are many reasons why this action is not appropriate for the State of Maine, including our seasonable cold climate which is significantly different from California. In the last few months there has been a significant amount of news warning against the carte blanc adoption of electric cars.

This unilateral rule making should not be approved.
