I'm totally opposed to the whole electric vehicle plan here in maine. Maybe it's different in California? Batteries in our cold climate? Is the electric grid even capable of supporting all that charging? Not to mention our electric power bills. Electric cars wear out tires much faster. The risks in a crash, from not only fire but the extra weight, adding to traffic safety problems.

This sounds alot like another problem of too much regulation. How are us poor people suppose to find money for new electric vehicles and to replace Batteries.
