Absolutely foolish. The technology is not there yet. Maine is too cold for evs The grid cannot handle all this charging. The cost to replace the batteries is almost as much as a new car, When the evs catch fire they are almost impossible to put out. They don't have a long enough range. We're in Maine remember. Everywhere you go is a lengthy drive. How are we supposed to get to work when the cars freeze up? Don't you morons watch the news? The trucks cannot tow enough wait for a long enough distance. This mandate is the dumbest thing I ever heard. Plus you're taking away our rights to choose the type of vehicle we want and and to drive.
