In the wake of the recent storm that Maine is still responding to I cannot believe that congress is still thinking electric vehicles are the best way to go for us. Where are the residents supposed to plug in for charging when they have no power for days from our frequent storms? With this rule they would not only be without electricity but they would also not have a vehicle to get to emergency shelters or other areas in times of need. Once again, this may be doable in inner cities but for country settings it makes no sense at all. I plead with our representatives to rethink this as it is not logical or reasonable for most of Maine. It's time to listen to the taxpayers and small businesses. Thank you.
