To whom it may concern,

I feel that this is a terrible idea and hope you take into consideration the many ME residents that also feel the same way. People will eventually move towards EVs as it begins to make more sense but forcing it on our communities is not the best way to handle this. Most people are struggling in most of our counties and they have a hard enough time taking care of themselves and their children. There are many other things that should be the primary focus. We are a lower population state and the dent we make on carbon is likely much lower than several other states but the dent this would do to much of our population will have people leaving our state. I love Maine, my homestate, and wish to protect it as much as possible but I don't feel that this is going to get the kind of results you may be looking for.

Thank you for your time.

Sincerely,

Jennifer Perigo
