This is such foolish and impractical legislation, especially given Maine's geography and climate. Furthermore, there is no solid proof that this will accomplish what is intended. Do you plan to next outlaw all fossil fueled cars, including collectables? How is an automobile dealer in Maine expected to survive with this type of anti-business legislation? Dealer are now faced with selling cars people do not want or cannot afford, which just pushes the problem up to the manufacturing level. Manufacturers are forced to produce cars people don't want, the costs of doing so which are being subsidized by the profits on cars people do want. That's just a hidden tax on those of us who are not buying into all of the impractical green ideology.

The refusal of the green brigade to accept hybrid vehicles as a solution is a perfect example of how blind people are being. The recent backlash against the entire automotive industry is just going to become worse.

This is being pushed because "It's what CA did" as if CA is a model state on anything. You have to be kidding.
