Lynne Cayting,

I am writing concerning Proposed Rule 127-A.

As a consumer, I have no desire to face higher vehicle costs, additional expenses to install charging equipment at my home, high financing rates, unknown electricity bills (which are already too high), decreased safety, lack of towing companies wishing to tow vehicles with lithium batteries, increased fire risk, and the incredibly high cost of battery replacement.

I believe that Maine's electric grid and charging station infrastructure is inadequate and that it cannot handle an increased demand. In the last several months, many Mainers have experienced widespread power outages for days as a result of severe weather.

For these reasons, please oppose this proposed rule. I do not wish the government to impose further restrictions on how I spend my money or the choices that I make.

Sincerely,

Lisa Wight
