This rule is irresponsible legislation. Yes climate change needs to be addressed, however, mandates that do not carefully consider that the impact on Maine citizens, nor contain detailed plans to address them, will result in unintended consequences. We have vastly different societal and geographical influences than the Californians from which this legislation was developed.

Additionally, there are many significant environmental concerns with electric vehicles that should be resolved at a Federal level before this very rapid change is implemented. Ill thought out and poorly researched environmental plans often result in very unintended consequences....anybody remember MTBE.
