I do not think this is the way to go for a number of reasons. The batteries are too costly, if we have no electricity from storm outages for days/weeks you can't recharge the batteries, and there are no places to recharge in the woods and rural areas. I just don't see it being a solution in our cold climate. It would take longer to go on trips, stopping to recharge. I think there would be too many people stranded. If there is an EMP we are in big trouble!! 😞
